

REAL CORPUS SUPPLEMENT — BATCH B

ADDITIONS

14 entries: H001–H008 (Haruf) + L001–L006 (Lindgren/Niemi)
Date: 2026-08-16

H001–H008 — KENT HARUF (Plainsong + Our Souls at Night)

REAL CORPUS EXTRACTIONS — KENT HARUF
Sources: Plainsong (2000) and Our Souls at Night (2015)
Entries: H001–H008
Note: Real corpus entries. Passages quoted directly from source text.

[H001] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Plainsong — Kent Haruf
RELATIONSHIP: STRANGER | DISTANT
POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A
SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE
LOCATION: DOMESTIC
BASELINE_EXPECTATION: Two old bachelor ranchers who have agreed to take in a pregnant teenage girl would be expected to say something about the arrangement — to explain the house, to acknowledge the situation, to speak about what they are doing.
BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL
FOCAL_ACTOR: Harold and Raymond McPherson
FOCAL_RESPONDER: Victoria Roubideaux

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: having cleaned the house before she arrived, without mentioning it

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PRACTICAL_CARE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [SILENCE]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: ARRIVAL

Inside, it was apparent at once that the McPheron brothers had made an effort.

The sink was empty of dishes, the table was scrubbed clean, the kitchen chairs were free of the mechanics' rags and the pieces of machinery they had held the day before, and the floor looked as hard-swept as if an immigrant woman had used her broom on it.

TRIGGER: Victoria Roubideaux, a pregnant seventeen-year-old with nowhere to go, has just arrived at the McPheron brothers' ranch for the first time. The brothers have never had a woman living in the house.

RESPONSE: The house has been cleaned. Neither brother mentions it. Harold shows her around, talking too much. Raymond says almost nothing.

NOTE: The cleaned house is the behavioral unit — the sunbleached outlines of books and magazines still visible on the table surface are the evidence of how recently it was done. Neither brother says anything about the cleaning. Harold talks about the sink and the gas range and then stops himself: "I reckon all that'd be more or less obvious to anybody. It don't require me to tell you." The cleaning is the communication; the not-mentioning is the behavioral completion of it. Two men who have lived alone for decades have prepared the house for a stranger they have agreed to shelter, and the preparation is the only statement they make about what that means to them.

[H002] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Plainsong — Kent Haruf
RELATIONSHIP: STRANGER | DISTANT
POWER: holder=ACTOR | degree=SLIGHT | basis=AGE
SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE
LOCATION: DOMESTIC
BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A person showing a stranger to their bathroom would not be expected to have made any special preparation for it.
BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION
FOCAL_ACTOR: Harold and Raymond McPheron
FOCAL_RESPONDER: Victoria Roubideaux
FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: having placed a new pink towel on the drying rod before she arrived
PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PROXY
SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [PRACTICAL_CARE]
OBSERVER: CORRECT
SELF_REPORT: ABSENT
ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH
MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR
STRUCTURE: ARRIVAL

On the shelves above the sink were various half-used jars of liniment and salve and Cornhuskers handbalm, and tubes of back-rub and sore-muscle ointment, and there was also tooth powder and denture adhesive and shaving equipment, and hanging over one of the drying rods next to the bathtub, together with two old towels, was a single fresh new pink towel that still had the store tag stapled to it.

TRIGGER: Victoria has been shown to her bedroom and has stepped into the bathroom alone for the first time.

RESPONSE: She finds two old towels and one new pink towel with the store tag still on it. Neither brother has mentioned it.

NOTE: The store tag is the behavioral unit — it confirms the towel was bought for her arrival, not already owned. The two old towels are the brothers' own; the pink one is hers. Neither brother mentions it, draws attention to it, or explains it.

It is simply there. The pink color against the old liniment jars and denture adhesive is the full measure of the effort: two old men who have never thought about towel color have thought about towel color. The not-mentioning is the behavioral completion: the care requires no acknowledgment.

[H003] NAMED

SOURCE: Plainsong — Kent Haruf

RELATIONSHIP: STRANGER | DISTANT

POWER: holder=ACTOR | degree=MODERATE | basis=AGE

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: DOMESTIC

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: An old woman who has been talking about herself to two boys collecting for the newspaper would be expected to continue talking about herself, or to pay them and let them go.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL

FOCAL_ACTOR: Iva Stearns

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Ike and Bobby

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: stopping and saying she is sorry about their mother

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PRACTICAL_CARE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [SILENCE]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

SIGNAL_ALIGNMENT: ALIGNED

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: REVERSAL

I'm very sorry, she said finally. I'm very sorry to hear about your mother.

Here I was, talking about myself. You must be lonely.

They didn't know how to say anything about that.

TRIGGER: Bobby has just told the old woman that their mother moved out of the house a few weeks ago. Ike told him to shut up. The old woman has just finished telling them her own family is all gone or dead.

RESPONSE: She stops. She says she is sorry. She says "here I was, talking about myself." She says they must be lonely. The boys don't know how to say anything about that.

NOTE: The narrator names the interior state through the old woman's words — "I'm very sorry" and "you must be lonely" are the narrator's confirmation of her recognition, not a character's self-report. The reversal is structural: she has been performing the role of the difficult old woman who makes the boys talk, and the moment Bobby tells her about their mother she drops it entirely. "Here I was, talking about myself" is the behavioral evidence of the reversal — she names what she was doing and stops doing it. The boys' silence — "they didn't know how to say anything about that" — is the behavioral completion: the care has been received but cannot be answered.

[H004] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Plainsong — Kent Haruf

RELATIONSHIP: PARENTAL | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A father asked why two old men never married would be expected to offer a practical explanation, or to deflect the question.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION

FOCAL_ACTOR: Bobby

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Tom Guthrie (father)

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: looking out the window and saying quietly "I guess they didn't want to leave each other"

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: OMISSION

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [ATMOSPHERIC]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: ROUTINE

*Bobby looked out the window. He said, I guess they didn't want to leave each other.
Guthrie glanced at him. Maybe so, he said. Maybe that's what happened, son.*

TRIGGER: Ike has asked their father why Harold and Raymond McPherson never got married and had a family like everybody else. The father has said he doesn't know, that people don't sometimes, that he guesses they never found the right girl.

RESPONSE: Bobby looks out the window and says quietly that he guesses they didn't want to leave each other. The father glances at him.

NOTE: The looking out the window is the behavioral unit — Bobby turns away before speaking. What he says is not an answer to the question asked (why didn't they marry) but an answer to a different question (what held them together). The father's glance is the behavioral evidence that he has heard something more than a child's observation. "Maybe so. Maybe that's what happened, son" — the "son" is the behavioral signal of the recognition: the father is speaking to the child who just said something true about love.

[H005] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Our Souls at Night — Kent Haruf

RELATIONSHIP: ROMANTIC | FORMING

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: DOMESTIC

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A man who has agreed to spend the night at a neighbor's house for the first time would be expected to simply arrive.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION

FOCAL_ACTOR: Louis Waters

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Addie Moore

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: getting a haircut and shave, eating lightly, scrubbing himself, trimming his nails, walking through the dark alley with his pajamas in a paper sack

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: DISPLACEMENT

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [PERFORMANCE]

OBSERVER: PARTIAL

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: OPENING

The next day Louis went to the barber on Main Street and had his hair cut short and neat, a kind of buzz cut, and asked the barber if he still shaved people and the barber said he did, so he got a shave too. Then he went home and called Addie and said, I'd like to come over tonight if that's still all right. He ate a light supper, just a sandwich and a glass of milk, he didn't want to feel heavy and laden in her bed, and then he took a long hot shower and scrubbed himself thoroughly. He trimmed his fingernails and toenails and at dark he went out the back door and walked up the back alley carrying a paper sack with his pajamas and toothbrush inside.

TRIGGER: Addie Moore has asked Louis Waters to come and sleep in her bed at night

— not for sex, but for company and conversation. He has said he will think about it. He has decided to come.

RESPONSE: He gets a haircut and a shave. He eats lightly so he won't feel heavy in her bed. He scrubs himself thoroughly. He trims his fingernails and toenails.

He walks through the dark alley so the neighbors won't see him.

NOTE: The preparation is the behavioral unit — none of it is mentioned to Addie, none of it is required by the arrangement. The haircut, the shave, the light supper, the scrubbing, the trimmed nails: each is the behavioral expression of what the evening means to him, carried out in private before he arrives.

He goes through the alley to avoid being seen, which Addie immediately corrects:

"The

alley makes it seem we're doing something wrong." He has been performing respectability for an audience that isn't there. The paper sack with the pajamas is the behavioral object that carries the whole weight of the decision.

[H006] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Our Souls at Night — Kent Haruf

RELATIONSHIP: ROMANTIC | FORMING

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: INSTITUTIONAL

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A woman who has been told by a man that he is sick and won't be coming over would be expected to wait to hear from him again.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION

FOCAL_ACTOR: Addie Moore

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Louis Waters

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: appearing in the chair beside his hospital bed when he wakes

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PRACTICAL_CARE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [SILENCE]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: CRISIS

They gave him antibiotics and he slept most of the afternoon and again was awake much of the night. In the morning he felt better and they told him he'd probably be released the next day. He ate breakfast and lunch and took a short nap and when he woke up around three she was sitting in the chair beside his bed. He looked at her. You weren't kidding, she said. Did you think I was? I thought you were just saying you were sick. That you decided you didn't want to be with me at night.

TRIGGER: Louis called Addie to say he was sick and wouldn't be coming. She hung up. He was admitted to hospital with a urinary tract infection. He has not called her since.

RESPONSE: She finds out from a neighbor that he is in hospital. She comes. She is sitting in the chair beside his bed when he wakes from his nap.

NOTE: The sitting in the chair is the behavioral unit — she has not been called, has not been asked to come, has not been told which hospital or which room. She found out from a neighbor and came anyway. "You weren't kidding" is the behavioral evidence of what she had been thinking: she had believed he was withdrawing. The coming to the hospital is the answer to that belief, and it is also the statement of what she is willing to do. She does not explain why she came. She simply says

"you weren't kidding."

[H007] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Our Souls at Night — Kent Haruf

RELATIONSHIP: ROMANTIC | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: DOMESTIC

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A man spending his last night with a woman before a forced separation would be expected to stay until morning.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL

FOCAL_ACTOR: Louis Waters

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Addie Moore

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: getting up at 4am, dressing, putting his pajamas in the paper bag,

and leaving while it is still dark

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: DISPLACEMENT

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [WITHDRAWAL]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: DEPARTURE

At four he got up again and dressed and put his pajamas and toothbrush in the paper bag.
Are you leaving?
I thought I would.
It's still night for a few more hours.
I can't see any point in putting this off.
She started to weep again.
He walked downstairs and went home past the old trees and the houses all dark and strange at this hour. The sky was still dark and nothing was moving. No cars in the streets. In his own house, he lay in bed watching the east window for the first sign of daylight.

TRIGGER: This is Louis and Addie's last night together. Addie's son has forced the arrangement to end. They have been lying awake. Addie has been crying.

RESPONSE: Louis gets up at 4am and puts his pajamas in the paper bag and leaves while it is still dark.

NOTE: The paper bag with the pajamas is the behavioral unit — it is the same object from the first night, when he walked through the dark alley carrying it for the first time. Now he puts the pajamas back in it and leaves. "I can't see any point in putting this off" is the behavioral expression of the same quality that brought him through the alley on the first night: a directness about what things mean. He walks home past the dark houses and lies in bed watching the east window. The watching for daylight is the behavioral completion: he is doing the same thing he did before Addie — lying awake alone, waiting for the night to end.

[H008] AMBIGUOUS

SOURCE: Our Souls at Night — Kent Haruf

RELATIONSHIP: ROMANTIC | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: SEMI_PUBLIC

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A woman who sees a man she has separated from walking past her house at night would be expected to either ignore him or signal to him.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION

FOCAL_ACTOR: Addie Moore

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Louis Waters

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: appearing at the window and making no gesture as he looks up

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: ATMOSPHERIC

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [OMISSION]

OBSERVER: UNKNOWN

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: MULTIPLE_PLAUSIBLE

STRUCTURE: AFTERMATH

As the weather held that fall Louis often walked out at night past her house and looked at the light shining upstairs in her bedroom, her bedside lamp that he knew and the room with its big bed and dark wooden dresser and the bathroom located down the hall, and remembered everything about the room and the nights lying in the dark talking and the closeness of it all. Then one night he noticed her face appear at the window and he stopped, she made no gesture nor any sign that she was looking at him. But when he was home again she called him on the phone. You can't do that anymore.

TRIGGER: Louis and Addie have been separated for some time. Louis has been walking past her house at night and looking at her light.

RESPONSE: One night her face appears at the window. She makes no gesture. When he is home she calls and tells him he can't do that anymore.

NOTE: The face at the window making no gesture is the behavioral unit. Whether she appeared at the window by chance and happened to see him, or whether she has known he was walking past and came to the window deliberately on this night, is MULTIPLE_PLAUSIBLE. The call that follows — "you can't do that anymore" — is the behavioral evidence that she has seen him and that it has cost her something. But whether the no-gesture was deliberate withholding or simply the shock of seeing him is not resolved. The narrator does not resolve it. Louis cannot know. The reader cannot know.

L001–L006 — ASTRID LINDGREN + MIKAEL NIEMI (Mio, My Son + Popular Music from Vittula)

REAL CORPUS EXTRACTIONS — LINDGREN & NIEMI

Sources: Mio, My Son — Astrid Lindgren (trans. Jill Morgan, 2003)

Popular Music from Vittula — Mikael Niemi (trans. Laurie Thompson, 2003)

Entries: L001–L006

[L001] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Mio, My Son — Astrid Lindgren (trans. Jill Morgan)

RELATIONSHIP: PARENTAL | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A father who has searched nine years for his lost son and finally found him would be expected to speak — to say his name, to explain, to express what the reunion means.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL

FOCAL_ACTOR: the father (the King)

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Mio

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: opening his arms and holding Mio close for a long time without

speaking

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PRACTICAL_CARE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [SILENCE]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: ARRIVAL

A man came striding along the water's edge. It was my father the King! I recognized him as soon as I saw him. I knew that he was my father. He opened his arms and I ran right into them. He held me close for a long time. We didn't say anything to each other. I just held my arms around his neck as tightly as I could.

TRIGGER: Mio (Karl Anders Nilsson) has just arrived in Farawayland after nine years of being lost. His father the King has been searching for him all that time.

RESPONSE: The father opens his arms. Mio runs into them. They hold each other for a long time without speaking.

NOTE: The silence is the behavioral unit — nine years of searching, and when the reunion comes there are no words. The narrator (Mio) does not name what the embrace means; he only describes it. "We didn't say anything to each other" is the behavioral completion: the holding is the entire communication. The detail that Mio held his arms around his neck "as tightly as I could" is the behavioral measure of the nine years of absence — the tightness is the only available expression of what cannot be said.

[L002] NAMED

SOURCE: Mio, My Son — Astrid Lindgren (trans. Jill Morgan)

RELATIONSHIP: PARENTAL | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A father walking with his son in a garden would not be expected to hold his hand — the boy is nine years old, old enough that handholding is unusual.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL

FOCAL_ACTOR: the father (the King)

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Mio

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: holding Mio's hand as they walk

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PRACTICAL_CARE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: []

OBSERVER: SELF_AWARE

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

SIGNAL_ALIGNMENT: ALIGNED

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: ROUTINE

He held my hand as we walked. Aunt Hulda and Uncle Olaf never held my hand; no one had ever held my hand before. That's the reason why I loved to walk there holding my father the King's hand, although I was really too old for it.

TRIGGER: Mio and his father are walking together toward the Garden of Roses for the first time.

RESPONSE: The father holds Mio's hand as they walk.

NOTE: The narrator names the interior state directly: "no one had ever held my hand before. That's the reason why I loved to walk there holding my father the King's hand, although I was really too old for it." NAMED at ROUTINE: the naming is necessary because the behavioral act (hand-holding on a walk) is ordinary — its weight comes entirely from the context the narrator supplies. The "although I was really too old for it" is the behavioral evidence of the self-awareness:

Mio
knows it is unusual, and does it anyway, and names why. The hand-holding is the behavioral measure of everything Aunt Hulda and Uncle Olaf withheld.

[L003] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Mio, My Son — Astrid Lindgren (trans. Jill Morgan)

RELATIONSHIP: PARENTAL | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A father who has been told his son wants to ride out at night would be expected to either permit it straightforwardly or express concern.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL

FOCAL_ACTOR: the father (the King)

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Mio

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: sitting with his head in his hands, then calling Mio back and holding him tightly before he leaves

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: DISPLACEMENT

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [PRACTICAL_CARE]

OBSERVER: PARTIAL

SELF_REPORT: PRESENT

SIGNAL_ALIGNMENT: CONTRADICTORY

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: DEPARTURE

*He sat silently after that, with his head in his hands and I could see he was unhappy. I went to him and put my arms around his shoulders to comfort him and said, "Do you want me to stay home with you?"
He looked at me for a long time with sad eyes.
"No, Mio, my son, you shouldn't stay. The moon has risen, and the Forest of Moonbeams awaits you."
"Are you sure you won't be worried?" I asked.
"Yes, I'm sure," he said, touching me gently on the head. Then I ran to ask Pompoo if he wanted to come with me to the Forest of Moonbeams.
But after
I'd taken a few steps, my father the King shouted to me, "Mio, my son!"
I turned around and there he stood with his arms stretched out toward me and I rushed back to him and threw myself into his arms.
He held me tightly, tightly for a long time.
"I'll come right back," I said.
"Will you?" said my father the King, and his voice wasn't much more than a whisper.*

TRIGGER: Mio has told his father he wants to ride to the Forest of Moonbeams at night. The father knows — though Mio does not yet — that this is the beginning of the quest that will take Mio into danger.

RESPONSE: The father says he is sure he won't be worried. He sits with his head in his hands. He calls Mio back and holds him tightly. He whispers "Will you?"

NOTE: SELF_REPORT: PRESENT ("Yes, I'm sure") — the father claims he won't be worried. SIGNAL_ALIGNMENT: CONTRADICTORY — the sitting with head in hands, the calling back, the tight holding, the whispered "Will you?" all contradict the claim. The behavioral unit is the calling back: he has already said goodbye, and then cannot let Mio go without holding him once more. The whispered "Will you?" is the only crack — the question he cannot not ask, even knowing the answer cannot be guaranteed.

[L004] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Mio, My Son — Astrid Lindgren (trans. Jill Morgan)

RELATIONSHIP: PARENTAL | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A father waiting for his son to return from a dangerous quest would be expected to show visible relief or joy when the son appears.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: TEXTUAL

FOCAL_ACTOR: the father (the King)

FOCAL_RESPONDER: Mio

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: standing in the same place where Mio left him, arms outstretched

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: ACCUMULATION

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [PRACTICAL_CARE]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: ARRIVAL

*Then I saw him. I saw my father the King. He stood in the same place, where I had left him when I rode away to the Forest of Moonbeams and to Outer Land.
He stood there with his arms outstretched to me and I threw myself into his embrace. I put my arms tightly, so tightly around his neck and he held me close and whispered, "Mio, my son!"*

TRIGGER: Mio has returned from the quest to defeat Sir Kato. He enters the Garden of Roses.

RESPONSE: The father is standing in the same place where Mio left him, arms already outstretched.

NOTE: "The same place" is the behavioral unit — he has been standing there, waiting, arms outstretched, since Mio rode away. The accumulation of the waiting is carried in the single detail of the unchanged position. He has not moved. The arms were already open before Mio appeared. The whispered "Mio, my son" is the behavioral completion: the name he said to himself for nine years while searching, now said to the boy who is actually there.

[L005] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Popular Music from Vittula — Mikael Niemi (trans. Laurie Thompson)

RELATIONSHIP: FRIENDSHIP | INTIMATE

POWER: holder=SYMMETRIC | degree=NONE | basis=N/A

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: DOMESTIC

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A friend who has just been through a traumatic public religious experience would be expected to talk about it, or to be asked about it.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION

FOCAL_ACTOR: Niila

FOCAL_RESPONDER: the narrator (Matti)

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: sneaking into the kitchen and sitting chewing a sandwich without

speaking

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: SILENCE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [WITHDRAWAL]

OBSERVER: CORRECT

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: HIGH

MEANING_DETERMINACY: CLEAR

STRUCTURE: AFTERMATH

He sneaked into our kitchen one afternoon, still looking staggered. Mum gave us each a sandwich and we sat there chewing. Niila occasionally pricked up his ears in that awkward way he had.

TRIGGER: Niila has just had a public religious conversion at a revival meeting — collapsing, being held by the congregation, weeping. It has been witnessed by the whole community. Several days have passed.

RESPONSE: He sneaks into Matti's kitchen. They are given sandwiches. They sit and chew. Niila says nothing. He occasionally pricks up his ears.

NOTE: The sneaking is the behavioral unit — he does not knock, does not announce himself, does not come through the front. He sneaks in, which is the behavioral expression of the need to be somewhere safe without having to explain why. The sitting and chewing without speaking is the behavioral completion: Matti does not ask, Niila does not explain, the mother gives them sandwiches. The "occasionally pricked up his ears in that awkward way he had" is the behavioral evidence that Niila is still processing — listening for something, or listening to something inside himself. The friendship register: the care is the not-asking.

[L006] IMPLIED

SOURCE: Popular Music from Vittula — Mikael Niemi (trans. Laurie Thompson)

RELATIONSHIP: PARENTAL | ESTABLISHED

POWER: holder=ACTOR | degree=STRONG | basis=PARENTAL_AUTHORITY

SOCIAL_VISIBILITY: PRIVATE

LOCATION: OUTDOOR

BASELINE_EXPECTATION: A father who wants his son to build physical strength would be expected to provide appropriate tools for the task.

BASELINE_SUPPORT: SOCIAL_CONVENTION

FOCAL_ACTOR: the father

FOCAL_RESPONDER: the narrator (Matti)

FOCAL_BEHAVIOR: giving his son the bluntest saw to build up his muscles, then checking to make sure he doesn't cheat

PRIMARY_MECHANISM: PRACTICAL_CARE

SECONDARY_MECHANISMS: [PERFORMANCE]

OBSERVER: PARTIAL

SELF_REPORT: ABSENT

ANNOTATION_CONFIDENCE: MEDIUM

MEANING_DETERMINACY: MULTIPLE_PLAUSIBLE

STRUCTURE: ROUTINE

He liked to make me saw wood with the bluntest saw he could find, to build up my muscles. He would occasionally check to make sure I didn't cheat, thrusting out his clog-shaped jaw and adjusting the peak of his cap, which kept slipping down his low, sloping forehead.

TRIGGER: The narrator's father, a silent man who has accomplished his three aims in life, wants his son to follow suit and become strong.

RESPONSE: He gives his son the bluntest saw and makes him work with it. He checks to make sure the boy doesn't cheat.

NOTE: The bluntest saw is the behavioral unit — he could give a sharp saw, but he gives the bluntest one. Whether this is deliberate pedagogy (the resistance builds strength) or a form of withholding (the boy must earn the good tools) is

MULTIPLE_PLAUSIBLE. The checking to make sure he doesn't cheat is the behavioral evidence of the attention: the silent father is watching. The physical description

— the clog-shaped jaw, the cap slipping down the sloping forehead — is the behavioral register of the Tornedalen father: a man described entirely through his body and his objects, never through his interior state.